

Service reduction illustration: central and southeast Seattle/south King County

In this illustration, bus trips and hours of service are reduced on about 40 routes in central and southeast Seattle and south King County.

Possible service reductions

- All-day service—Leschi and parts of Eastlake and Montlake (Lakeview Boulevard, Harvard Avenue E, E Lynn Street) could lose all service.
- Peak service—Riders traveling to Bellevue, downtown Seattle, First Hill, Rainier Beach, and the University District during peak travel periods could see a reduction in service, which could create crowded conditions. Some riders who currently have direct trips could have to transfer to get to their destinations.
- Midday/weekend service—Capitol Hill, the Central District, First Hill, Madrona, and Rainier Beach could see reductions in services during off-peak travel periods.
- Night service—Beacon Hill, Capitol Hill, the Central District, Eastlake, First Hill, Madison Park, Madrona, Montlake, Mount Baker, Rainier Beach, and Skyway could see reductions in night service.
- Other changes—In addition to the reductions listed above, some routes could be modified to be more direct or to serve different markets.

Many riders would have to change the way they travel. Metro would work to accommodate riders on major transit corridors, but some trips would no longer have the capacity to meet the demand for service. Riders on major routes could experience very crowded buses. They could also be passed up by full buses more often, and might have to adjust how they travel as a result of the changes. Metro might have to make further reductions in lower-priority areas in order to provide adequate service levels on major transit corridors.

- Routes that could change: 2, 3, 4, 7, 7X, 8, 9X, 10, 11, 12, 14, 25, 27, 36, 43, 47, 60, 70, 84, 99, 106, 107, 114, 193X, 205X, 210, 211X, 215, 216, 243, 250, 255, 257, 260, 265, 268, 271, 277, 311.
- Other routes that could experience crowding and reliability issues: 49, 50, 101.
